

The Report Structure

Quiz, 5 questions

1
point

1.

Regardless of the length of the final deliverable, the author recommends that it includes a cover page, table of contents, executive summary, detailed contents, acknowledgments, and references.

☐ False.

☒ True.

1
point

2.

An introductory section is always helpful in:

☐ Advertising the product.

☐ Introducing the research methods.

☒ Setting up the problem for the reader who might be new to the topic.

☐ Presenting the statistical calculations.

1
point

3.

The results section is where you present:

☐ The conclusion.

☐ The methods used.

☒ The empirical findings.

☐

☐ R Squared.

The Report Structure

Quiz, 5 questions

1
point

4.

The discussion section is where you introduce the research methods and data sources used for the analysis.

☒ True.

☐ False.

1
point

5.

Adding a list of references and an acknowledgment section are examples of housekeeping, according to the author.

☐ False.

☒ True.
